- Rural Management
- Micro, Macro and Development Economics
- Management of technology and innovation

We invite original, high quality research manuscripts in the field of management with the objective of extending existing management theories and bringing to forefront the application of existing theories in an innovative manner. Authors are encouraged to submit contributions on management topics which are applied in organizational or consumer-level studies in a global context. We welcome both theoretical and empirical papers with quantitative or qualitative research methods, as long as the studies are methodologically rigorous and are pertaining to concurrent issues in business and management. Case studies, executive insights, research notes, book reviews posited in a global research context are also welcome. Papers highlighting cross-cultural and comparative perspectives on business and management practices are especially encouraged.

Manuscripts should be submitted to the editor at jjbr@jgu.edu.in
