Journal of Heritage Management (JHM) announces a call for papers and invites manuscripts for its forthcoming issues.

The journal addresses the challenge of managing heritage – cultural, natural and mixed – across the world, and developing and applying management theories and techniques to the field of heritage and conservation. The journal is a forum for sharing theoretical discourses, analyzing policies and practices, and promoting discussions on key issues on heritage management.

The Journal is multidisciplinary in nature and includes disciplines such as Art History, Architecture, Archaeology, Anthropology, Ecology, Biodiversity, Cultural Geography, History, Cultural Studies, etc. The journal is primarily, but by no means exclusively, aimed at academicians and professionals from these disciplines, who may have a focus on heritage and its management.
